A Brief History of the Diocese

European exploration and conquest of North America is one of overlapping claims and fluid borders. Initially, Spain claimed the entire Gulf Coast from Florida to Texas as part of its empire. The French, beginning with LaSalle, had other ideas and laid claim to the entire Mississippi River watershed, effectively splitting the Spanish territory in half. Eventually, the French established settlements along the Gulf Coast beyond the Mississippi River basin. These included such places as Biloxi and Mobile to the east and small forts and settlements in what is now Texas to the west.

The boundaries continued to shift due to the European wars of the eighteenth century, culminating in the Seven Years’ War, known in North America as the French and Indian War. In the 1763 Treaty of Paris, France ceded Canada and all of Louisiana east of the Mississippi River to Britain, except the Ile d’Orleans. They ceded this latter territory and Louisiana west of the Mississippi River to Spain. [See Figure 1] During the war, Britain captured Havana, Spain’s preeminent port in the Caribbean. Spain yielded Florida to Britain for the return of Havana.

The British split Florida into two colonies at the Apalachicola River, creating the territories of East Florida and West Florida. They expanded West Florida north to include the southern half of modern Mississippi and Alabama including the city of Natchez and west to the Mississippi River including the city of Baton Rouge and all of modern Louisiana east of the river and north of Lake Pontchartrain. This area in Louisiana is known today as the Florida Parishes. [see Figure 2]
Britain’s hold on the territory was quite fleeting. Spain joined with France during the U.S. Revolutionary War and used it as an opportunity to attack and capture the British positions in Biloxi, Mobile, Pensacola, and St. Augustine. The Treaty of Paris 1783 ending the war returned both East Florida and West Florida to Spain although with ambiguous northern and western borders. The Spanish moved the boundary between the two Floridas east from the Apalachicola River to the Suwanee River.

With changes in political boundaries came the need to adjust ecclesiastical boundaries. Typically, the Roman Catholic Church prefers to have bishops and archbishops overseeing a diocese located within one political jurisdiction. The church, at the urging of the Spanish authorities, put religious matters of the two Floridas under the jurisdiction of the Bishop of Santiago de Cuba. That bishop already had authority over church affairs in the Louisiana territory.

This arrangement proved to be untenable. The Spanish authorities proposed the creation of the Diocese of St. Christopher with its seat in Havana. Louisiana and the Floridas became part of the new diocese, but with an auxiliary bishop on the mainland. This arrangement also proved unworkable. At the request of King Charles IV, Pope Pius VI established the Diocese of Louisiana and the Floridas with its seat in New Orleans, and appointed Luis Ignacio Maria de Peñalver y Cardenas the first Bishop in 1793.

When Bishop Peñalver arrived in New Orleans to take possession of his See, he found a variety of problems. The population, influenced by the French Revolution, had become anti-clerical and anti-religion. Combined with a general antipathy of all things Spanish and a shortage of clergy, the new bishop faced obstacles and difficulties. After six years, he petitioned for a change to another diocese, and received an appointment as Archbishop of Guatemala.

Francisco Porro y Peinado received an appointment as the second bishop of the diocese in 1801, but hearing rumors of the impending transfer of the territory from Spain to France, he delayed his travel and never actually took possession of it. With the sale of Louisiana from France to the US, the diocese came under the supervision of Bishop John Carroll of Baltimore. Because the Floridas still belonged to Spain, their status became unclear, although the Bishop of Havana asserted jurisdiction.

In 1815, Louis-Guillaume[William]-Valentin DuBourg became the third bishop of the diocese. He encountered some of the same problems in New Orleans as those faced by Bishop Penalver. Consequently, he relocated to St. Louis and ran the diocese from there.

While in St. Louis, Bishop DuBourg appealed to France for priests and nuns to serve in the diocese and to evangelize among the Native Americans in its western territory. Those who answered the appeal included Mother Philippine...
Duchesne, Father Joseph Rosati, and Father Pierre-Jean De Smet, all well-known names in St. Louis and western U.S. history. He also built a cathedral, the first in the United States west of the Mississippi River, and founded the St. Louis Latin Academy, the predecessor of St. Louis University.

In 1825, Pope Leo XII erected the Vicariate Apostolic of Alabama and the Floridas, taking territory from the diocese. The same pope split the diocese in 1826 to create the new Dioceses of New Orleans and St. Louis.

The Content of the Record Set

To use the records of the Diocese of Louisiana and the Floridas effectively, it is important to understand what it does and does not include. For example, the record set does not contain the records of the individual parishes within its borders. These records typically remain at the parish itself or in the archives of the parish’s contemporary diocese or archdiocese. In some cases, you might also find them digitized on Ancestry, FamilySearch, or FindMyPast.

Instead, the records contain documents created by and for the diocese. Although often created by the bishop’s staff, the records may also have come from outside sources such as the papacy, the king of Spain, or other dioceses and archdioceses. While this is not an exclusive list, some of the items you might find in these records include:

- Reports of missionary activities
- Royal and Papal decrees
- Royal instructions for marriages among Protestants in the territory or between Protestants and Catholics.
- Financial records of the diocese and some of the parishes within the diocese
- Parish census reports
- Accounts of the bishop visiting parishes within the diocese
- Appointment of pastors to the various parishes in the diocese
- Records establishing parishes in the diocese
- Discipline of pastors and other clergy
- Indications from pastors whether or not they desired to stay in their parishes after the retrocession of Louisiana from Spain to France and its subsequent sale to the United States
- Special appeals to the bishop
  - Sanctuary
  - Dispensations

While some of these items might appear to be of little use for genealogical research, others could be real gems.
Using the Records

You can access them through Notre Dame University’s online portal at https://archives.nd.edu/mano/. Start searching with the “Alphabetical List” created by Notre Dame. They evaluated the records and created a calendar for them. The index does not include every name mentioned in the record set, but does list the names of the authors of the items found in the collection and the names of the principal people involved in the record. To find the list, scroll down to the bottom of the webpage.

Consider the example of Hipolite Dupuis. His name appears in the alphabetical list with a date 1799 Dec 16 and the note (proceedings for dispensation). [See Figure 3 for his name in the alphabetical list.]

For the next step, search the calendar entry to be sure the record in question pertains to the correct person of that name. In our example, we want to be sure the Hipolite Dupuis named in the alphabetical list is actually our ancestor rather than someone else with the same name. The website makes this a particularly easy step, because it provides a link directly from the alphabetical list to the calendar.

The link will take you to an abbreviated calendar entry, with cross-links for other names in the documents. It also provides a link to the original calendar entry. Although abstracted from the original documents, the original calendar entry typically goes into enough detail to determine whether to pursue the originals.

The calendar tells us Dupuis, of Iberville, Louisiana, wished to marry Ana Maria Josefa Adelayda Doucet of the same town. Canon Law, however, did not permit the marriage because they were related in the third degree [second cousins]. This was a significant problem among the Acadians (now known as Cajuns) who settled in the bayou country of southwestern Louisiana. They tended to live in small communities and over time, everyone in the area was related to everyone else.

The next calendar card further elaborates on the situation, specifically the details of the relationship. Dupuis states “he is the son of Isabel Belnois, daughter of Elena Como, daughter of Esteban Como; that Ana is the daughter of Ana Como, daughter of Carlos Como, (son) of Esteban Como; that Ana’s mother is dead and her father is needy.” The cards further describe his poverty as “Ana’s father is 56 and although he has a house and two Negroes, he is poor.”
According to the calendar, other witnesses provided testimony. Ultimately, the bishop “grants the dispensation on condition that they make a general confession before marrying and one other afterwards, that during the publishing of the banns they fast three days and recite the rosary every night. A letter is to be sent to the pastor of Iberville that he may marry them when the conditions are fulfilled. A church official, Valdes, certifies this and adds that he notified Dupuys (Dupuis) of the decree and sent the letter [to the parish priest].”

Although the calendar entry appears informative and complete, a good researcher will not stop with an abstract, especially one completed by someone else. Next, we must look at the original documents. Some researchers may find reading handwritten documents in Spanish challenging. Nevertheless, we must look at the original. See Figure 4.

Once we are satisfied that we have gleaned all of the information from the documents, what is the next step? Look for other resources. These might be in the Archdioceses of New Orleans, Mobile, or St. Louis, or the Dioceses of Biloxi, Baton Rouge, Lafayette, Houma-Thibodaux, Pensacola-Tallahassee, St. Augustine, or Belleville.

In the case of our example, Hipolite Dupuis and his family lived in Iberville Parish. That area is included in the Diocese of Baton Rouge, so we will look in the records there.

Among these records, we learn the marriage of Hipolite Dupuis and Anna Maria Josefa Delaide Douset took place on 14 January 1800 at St. Gabriel Church, presumably after completing the requirements placed on the dispensation by the bishop. The record also names the parents of the bride and groom and the witnesses. See Figure 5.

The same records also include the marriages of Hipolite’s parents, Jean-Baptiste Dupuis and Elizabeth Benoit, described as Acadians, and the parents of Anna Douset, Jean-Baptiste and Ann Como. Earlier ancestors may be in volume one of the same series, or in Acadian records. [See “The Acadians, 18th-century Refugees,” in the July 2018 edition of PastPorts <bit.ly/3iACZmd>.

Another Way to find Your Ancestor’s Dispensation

A print volume, Marriage Dispensations in the Diocese of Louisiana and the Floridas, 1786-1803, may be another access point to these records. Although the book only references dispensations, the index appears to include more names.
than the online index at Notre Dame. For example, the book index includes the name Auguste Chouteau, a well-known name in St. Louis history, but the online index does not mention him.

The case before Bishop Peñalver concerned the marriage of Bernardo Ruiz de Molino and Pelagia Berdon. The groom served as a lieutenant in the Spanish garrison in St. Louis and received permission from his commander to marry Berdon. Chouteau, as Berdon’s legal guardian, gave his permission as well. None of this would have been problematic, except that the couple married in Cahokia rather than in St. Louis. Cahokia was then in the Diocese of Baltimore. This meant the couple married outside of their own parish and diocese, potentially making the marriage invalid. This required the Bishop in New Orleans to grant a disposition and order the marriage recorded in the correct parish register.

Other Useful Genealogical Information in the Records

About once a year, the parish priests in the Diocese of Louisiana and the Floridas made a “census report” of their parish to the bishop. These typically consisted of a membership number, and the number of baptisms, marriages, and burials in the parish during the prior year and did not list the names of individuals. [See Figure 6]¹⁹

These reports did, however, include the names of people who failed to meet their Easter Duty. Easter Duty, a precept of the church, requires the faithful to participate in the Eucharist at least once during the seven-week Easter season. Failing to meet this requirement was a serious problem and required the attention of the bishop. [See Figure 7]²⁰

African Americans researching enslaved ancestors may find information about their ancestors in these records. Although few in number, some cases exist of religious orders requesting the bishop’s permission to sell one or more of their enslaved people. Two examples of this occur in the records for 24 May 1803. In the first, the Ursuline sisters ask to sell a young girl, Adelayda, aged 7, to Mrs. Barbara Rita Lobato, in exchange for the 200 pesos they owe her. [See Figure 8]²¹ In the second, the same order asks permission to sell Antonio, age about 50, to his wife, Roseta, a free person of color for 400 pesos so that she can free him. [See Figure 9]²²

When it became clear that Spain would cede the territory of Louisiana to France in 1803, Thomas Hassett, Administrator of the Diocese, sent a letter to the priests and other church officials asking if they wanted to stay in the territory or transfer to a different Spanish territory. Their answers appear in the record set.
Final Thoughts and Conclusions

The records of the Diocese of Louisiana and the Floridas offers insight into the lives of our North American French Ancestors, particularly those living in the gulf coast area. Notre Dame’s digitization of the records offers us easy access that typically would not be available for this type of record.

What will you find by searching these records?

LIBRARY CLOSURE

Sunday, April 17, H & G will be closed for the Easter holiday.
*All SLCL library branches will be used as polling places for the April 5 municipal election but will remain open.

NEW CATALOG

St. Louis County Library and St. Louis Public Library launched a new shared catalog on March 17. This partnership gives SLCL cardholders access to millions more books, movies and music, as well as many updated patron account features.
From Aarons of the South to The Zychlinski Family, History & Genealogy has over 14,000 family history books in its collection, many of which circulate. A family history book is a record of a family and the lives of its members. Many of the family histories in the collection are a part of the National Genealogical Society (NGS) Collection. Now family histories are purchased by H & G or donated through NGS every year. The books can be searched in the SLCL catalog and also browsed, as the Dewey Decimal system puts them in surname order. The call number for family history books begins with 929.2, and they are currently located on Tier 4 in H & G at the Headquarters Branch.

Many family history books have also been digitized and can be located online. They can be found on websites like Hathitrust and Archive.org, as well as in databases such as AncestryLibraryEdition, Fold3, and Familysearch.org. Much like with online family trees, family history books should be corroborated with evidence.

If you are interested in writing your own family history, H & G has several books to guide you through the process, including Guide to Genealogical Writing: How to Write and Publish Your Family History by Penelope L. Stratton and Henry B. Hoff, CG, FASG (929.1 S911G) and Publish your Family History: A Step-by-step Guide to Writing the Stories of Your Ancestors by Dina C. Carson (929.1 C321P). Both of these guides can be checked out.

Don’t forget, the 1950 census will be released April 1! See the February 2022 edition of PastPorts for tips and more information. If you would like to be a part of bringing this new genealogy resource to life by making it searchable, volunteer indexing opportunities can be found at https://www.familysearch.org/1950census/.

The “Your Library Renewed” campaign that began in 2012 is coming to a close. All St. Louis County Library branches have been refurbished or replaced. The penultimate project, the Lynn Beckwith, Jr. Administration Building, is nearing completion. The final project, a new Ladue Branch, will begin this year. See https://www.slcl.org/your-library-renewed for more information. More details to follow.
NEW Periodicals

Did your ancestors live in Kentucky? History & Genealogy at the St. Louis County Library has recently acquired the following new periodicals:

Clay County Ancestral News
1985-2020, Volumes 1-36
Clay County Historical Society

Whitley Branches
1997-2020, Volumes 1-95
Whitley County Historical & Genealogical Society, Inc.

Branches of Laurel
1986-2019, Volumes 3-34
Laurel County Historical Society

Yesterday’s Tuckaways
1969-2017, Volumes 1-49
Hopkins County Kentucky Genealogical Society, Inc.

Genealogy periodicals are monthly, quarterly or yearly publications from local historical and genealogical societies. These periodicals contain a wealth of genealogical information, including articles, indexes and maps. All periodical titles can be found in the St. Louis County Library’s card catalog. As periodicals are housed in closed stacks, please see a History & Genealogy staff member for help retrieving the periodicals you need.

WARREN E. MILTEER, JR.
Beyond Slavery’s Shadow
Chapel Hill: The University of North Carolina Press
975.00496 M662B

On the eve of the Civil War, most people of color in the United States toiled in bondage. Yet nearly half a million of these individuals, including over 250,000 in the South, were free. In Beyond Slavery’s Shadow, Warren Eugene Milteer Jr. draws from a wide array of sources to demonstrate that from the colonial period through the Civil War, the growing influence of white supremacy and proslavery extremism created serious challenges for free persons categorized as negroes, mulattoes, mustees, Indians, or simply free people of color in the South. Segregation, exclusion, disfranchisement, and discriminatory punishment were ingrained in their collective experiences.

Nevertheless, in the face of attempts to deny them the most basic privileges and rights, free people of color defended their families and established organizations and businesses.

These people were both privileged and victimized, both celebrated and despised, in a region characterized by social inconsistency. Milteer’s analysis of the way wealth, gender, and occupation intersected with ideas promoting white supremacy and discrimination reveals a wide range of social interactions and life outcomes for the South’s free people of color and helps to explain societal contradictions that continue to appear in the modern United States.—Publisher

HERBERT K. RUSSELL
The State of Southern Illinois: An Illustrated History
Southern Illinois University Press
977.3 R963S

In The State of Southern Illinois: An Illustrated History, Herbert K. Russell offers fresh interpretations of a number of important aspects of Southern Illinois history. Focusing on the area known as “Egypt,” the region south of U.S. Route 50 from Salem south to Cairo, he begins his book with the earliest geologic formations and follows Southern Illinois’s history into the twenty-first century. The volume is richly illustrated with maps and photographs, mostly in color, that highlight the informative and straightforward text. Perhaps most notable is the author’s use of dozens of heretofore neglected sources to dispel the myth that Southern Illinois is merely an extension of Dixie. He corrects the popular impressions that slavery was introduced by early settlers from the South and that a majority of Southern Illinoisans wished to secede. Furthermore, he presents the first in-depth discussion of twelve pre-Civil War, free black communities located in the region. He also identifies the roles coal mining, labor violence, gangsters, and the media played in establishing the area’s image. He concludes optimistically, unveiling a twenty-first-century Southern Illinois filled with myriad attractions and opportunities for citizens and tourists alike. The State of Southern Illinois is the most accurate all-encompassing volume of history on this unique area that often regards itself as a state within a state. It offers an entirely new perspective on race relations, provides insightful information on the cultural divide between north and south in Illinois, and pays tribute to an often neglected and misunderstood region of this multidimensional state, all against a stunning visual backdrop.—Publisher

VIRGINIA K. BARTLETT
Keeping House: Women’s Lives in Western Pennsylvania 1790-1850
University of Pittsburgh Press
974.8 B291K

This book is a fascinating re-creation of the lives of women in the time of great social change that followed the end of the French and Indian War in western Pennsylvania. Many decades passed before a desolate and violent frontier was transformed into a stable region of farms and towns. Keeping House: Women’s Lives in Western Pennsylvania, 1790–1850 tells how the daughters, wives, and mothers who crossed the Allegheny Mountains responded and adapted to unaccustomed physical and psychological hardships as they established lives for themselves and their families in their new homes. Intrigued by late eighteenth and early nineteenth-century manuscript cookbooks in the collection of the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania, Virginia Bartlett wanted to find out more about women living in the region during that period. Quoting from journals, letters, cookbooks, travelers’ accounts—approving and critical—memoirs, documents, and newspapers, she offers us voices of women and men commenting seriously and humorously on what was going on around them. The text is well-illustrated with contemporaneous art—engravings, paintings, drawings, and cartoons. Of special interest are color and black-and-white photographs of furnishings, housewares, clothing, and portraits from the collections of the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania.—Publisher

NEWS AND TIPS | HISTORY AND GENEALOGY AT ST. LOUIS COUNTY LIBRARY
History & Genealogy services

The following H&G services are free and available to researchers who are unable to visit the library.

Lookup service
H&G can provide photocopies, prints, or digital scans of many library materials from indexed sources or when given a specific citation:
- Up to 30 pages from one book or one article from a journal issue. Staff can also photocopy or scan tables of contents and index pages.
- Print outs from database records if patrons cannot access the database at home.
- Please use the online lookup request form https://bit.ly/2UQXJKE to submit requests.

Print collection
More than 27,000 books in the collection can be checked out. The entire collection is included in the library’s online catalog https://slouc.na2.iiivega.com/. Books with call numbers that do not begin with “R” are available to check out. Patrons can request books online or by calling 314-994-3300.

Research guidance
H&G staff members can provide research assistance by phone.

Book-a-Genealogist
Researchers encountering brick-walls or who would like assistance in developing a plan to achieve specific research goals can schedule a phone consultation with an H&G staff member. Requests can be made using the online Book-a-Genealogist form https://bit.ly/3fQbB0r.

This month in history

“Open ye gates. Swing wide, ye portals.” were the words that officially opened the St. Louis World’s Fair on April 30, 1904. The Louisiana Purchase Exposition would last for the next seven months and ultimately host some 20 million visitors.

The fairgrounds covered 1,200 acres of Forest Park and consisted of 1,500 buildings. The fairgoers experienced modern advancements in technology, agriculture, art, and history. Some such advancements that were on display at the fair included private automobiles, outdoor electric lighting, and the X-ray machine. Attendees were also delighted with trying exciting new foods, amusement rides, and never-before-seen entertainment acts.

For more information on this historical event that has shaped our city’s culture for 118 years, check out the resources available in History & Genealogy.

NEW PRINT POLICIES

As of January 1, 2022, the library resumed charging for print, copy and fax services. Each library cardholder will receive a monthly credit of $5.00 for computer printouts.

H & G printouts:
- Black and white printouts (8.5 x 11 or 11 x 17 in): $0.10
- Color printouts (staff assistance) (8.5 x 11 or 11 x 17 in): $0.25

H & G copies:
- Black and white copy (8.5 x 11 or 11 x 17 in): $0.10
- Color copy (8.5 x 11 or 11 x 17 in): $0.25
SLCL HISTORY PROGRAM

St. Louis County Library will present the following virtual program:

Ulysses S. Grant, Robert E. Lee and the Appomattox Surrender
April 7, 2:00 pm
Presented by the National Park Service. Examine the final days of the Appomattox Campaign and the surrender terms negotiated between Generals Grant and Lee at Appomattox Courthouse. Adults. Registration required. Participants will receive Zoom information via email immediately after registering. A recording of this virtual program will be posted to YouTube within three business days. Register at https://www.slcl.org/events.

TECH TALK

Would you like to show your online family tree to a family member who does not use the internet? Bring your online discoveries to a family reunion in the park?

The St. Louis County Library loans mobile wi-fi Hotspots!

Access the internet on the go, anywhere, any time with a wi-fi mobile Hotspot. Free mobile internet access is being provided by the St. Louis County Library through T-Mobile. Hotspots can be checked out by adult cardholders in good standing. For more information, visit https://www.slcl.org/wi-fi-hotspots. Hotspots can be requested through the SLCL catalog.

HeritageQuest Online

HeritageQuest Online is available through the St. Louis County Library. It provides access to U.S. Federal Census records, local and family history books, Revolutionary War Pension & Bounty-Land Warrant applications, Freedman's Bank records, the Social Security Death Index, wills & probate records and more. HeritageQuest is owned by Ancestry.com and contains a sampling of databases from the larger AncestryLibraryEdition collection. It also has the same searching interface. HeritageQuest can be used from home with your SLCL library card, and is therefore a useful substitute for census records usually found on AncestryLibraryEdition, especially when you need at-home access.

Mark your calendars for the 2022 National Genealogical Society Family History Conference. Three options will be offered: in person in Sacramento, online at home, or streaming on-demand after the conference. See https://conference.ngsgenealogy.org/ for more details.
