Getting More out of FamilySearch.org

Introduction

In order to get more out of your FamilySearch experience, you need to take advantage of all the resources hidden behind the scenes. The majority of records available through the FamilySearch database are not searchable using the Global Search Feature. You must locate the sources using the Family Search Catalog.

What is the Family Search Catalog?

The Catalog is a guide to birth, marriage, and death records; census records; church registers; books; periodicals; family histories and many other records that contain genealogical information. It is important to understand that FamilySearch is a catalog to an actual physical library located in Salt Lake City, Utah. Records in FamilySearch may be searchable online, on microfiche or microfilm, or in a book or in a computer file.

Some entries in the FamilySearch Catalog include images of records. When an image is available in the catalog, a camera icon will appear to the right of the microfilm note associated with that image.

Where is the Catalog?

The FamilySearch Catalog is available on the Internet at FamilySearch.org. It can be located on the homepage under the Search tab. Select Catalog

Getting More Out of the Catalog

1. Identify a Query

Many people who get into FamilySearch end up looking for the wrong things. Before you use the FamilySearch Catalog, it helps to choose a query about which you want to find more information, and decide what you want to learn. Pick a Specific Query – What is your goal? Why are you searching? What are you “actually” looking for?

2. Identify the right sources

It is very easy to get confused and start looking for the wrong things. A passenger list will not generally tell you the village of origin for an ancestor. A will will not say a spouses’ maiden name (though it might list relatives – and the maiden name might be on the document!). When searching FamilySearch, know the Question(s) you are trying to answer and that will aide you in deciphering what records to look for to help answer your questions.

3. Be Reasonably Exhaustive

Look at everything produced by an Event. Look for patterns. Look at the community. Follow those paths. If you look at a will and see witnesses, trace them. If you look at a deed, who bought or sold the property. These are all clues. Who are these people? Where did they come from?

4. Indexes are your Friend

The LDS Church and Family History Library have been microfilming for years at courthouses and archives all over the world. Those courthouses and archives often developed systems for locating their own records – in most cases, they weren’t just rotting in a basement. Therefore, many of the records in FamilySearch have indexes – these might be a separate document or they may be included in the actual record source. Grantor and Grantee Indexes, Probate Indexes, Will Indexes, etc. Pay close attention to what sources are available.

5. The Place Search*

The most useful type of search in FamilySearch is the place search. To search for a place in FamilySearch, we enter locations in reverse:

United States, Pennsylvania, Adams, Gettysburg (Fig. 1)

A place search will bring you to a list of subjects related to that location – Probate, Deed, Vital, etc. Conduct County and City searches in the United States – especially when there are issues with city – county relationships such as St. Louis, MO. (Fig. 2)

You can select a subject and expand it out to see what sources are available (fig. 3)

Selecting a source will take you to its catalog page. Some items are only available in Salt Lake City, others are digitized. Some Digitized options are only available from Family History Affiliates, other from Family History Centers. (Fig. 4)
If you scroll down the source page, FamilySearch will let you know the format and what vols. Are available for the title. (fig. 5).

In the case of Figure 5, we are looking at Deeds for Adams Co., PA. Note the Grantor and Grantee Indexes. If we select the camera out to the right, we go to a digitized image of the microfilm. (Fig. 6)

If the Camera has a key, it is a locked record and is of limited access – to either a Family History Affiliate or a Family History Center. SLCL is an Affiliate. If we select an image in the film (fig. 7)
In fig 7, we see a page from the Grantor Index to Adams Co., PA. In the upper left, you see the FHL Film #. Below that is the image # and the total images. Below that are Zoom tools as well as a tool to move from single image view to the whole film view. In the upper right, you will see options to Download, Print, as well as attach to Family Tree and Source Box. In this case, we would search for the Grantor, identifying the book, page, and date of the deed. We would then return to the source page to find the book. In this case, Armstrong Abbott’s deed is in Book G, Page, 237 (fig. 8).

If records are part of a larger set, such as Ohio, Jefferson County Court Records, 1797-1947, your search will be redirected. (Fig. 9) In these cases, a hyper link will say “click here” in the middle of source page.

This will redirect you to a page where you have multiple option types. In cases where it is a state record series, it will list counties.

Select the county then select which record set you wish to view. In fig. 11, it is a county level record series – so it only shows us the record sets. If we select probate records, we get a list of record sets, similar to, but not identical to that seen in fig. 5.

Source Indexing is not always in a separate file. Sometimes, county records included indexes at the beginning or end of their local court books. The Administrator Applications & Bonds of Jefferson County, Ohio are an excellent example. If we select this source from Fig. 12, we are taken to Fig. 13.
